Read the following passage, then choose answer from a,b,c or d:

Jennifer was thinking in her room. She wanted a shelter there since false gossip about her began circulating at the academy last week. Not that Jennifer had ever been considered a social butterfly. She preferred to live indirectly through the stories of her more unashamed friends: late night celebrating, associating with girls, childish tricks. Still, she had taken to be more by herself than usual since the accusations surfaced and that thing made her on thin ice. She was up for consideration for the highly popular Blauvelt Award, a scholarship recognizing "academic integrity and promise."

A student had given headmaster Jack an anonymous "tip" that Jennifer had cheated on several tests. The accusations were laughable. Jennifer had long been a clever student at the academy. She lacked a natural intelligence- this was true. However, she compensated for this shortage through carefulness and insistence; she was very thorough in her studies and exhibited an almost relentless determination. Still, the accusations had given the recommendation committee pause.

On Friday Jennifer had been called to Mr. Jack grand office, where she was asked copious questions about her recent exams. The experience was quite shocking. It was an elite school. Most of its students came from honored backgrounds. This was not the case for Jennifer. Her family had little money. She attended the school on a full scholarship. The Award would help her family pay for college. So, it was with the same diligence which she applied to her studies that Jennifer planned to reveal her accuser.

Read the following passage, then choose answer from a,b,c or d:

About 349 million people across 79 countries are facing acute food insecurity – up from 287 million in 2021. The global community must not fail on its promise to end hunger and malnutrition by 2030. Many innovations that were once heavily supported and publicized, such as fish-protein concentrate and protein from algae grown on petroleum substrates, have fallen by the wayside. The proposals themselves were technically feasible, but they proved to be economically unviable and to yield food products culturally unacceptable to their consumers. Recent innovations such as opaque-2 maize seems promising, but it is too early to predict its ultimate fate.

Despite having extensive governmental support, these unsuccessful innovations often have not been technologically adapted or culturally acceptable to the people for whom they had been developed. A successful new technology, therefore, must fit the entire sociocultural system in which it is to find a place. Security of crop yield, practicality of storage, taste and costs should be put in consideration. For example, the better protein quality in bread made from opaque-2 maize will be of only limited benefit to a family on the margin of subsistence if the new maize is not culturally acceptable or is more likely to be attacked by insects.

The adoption of new food technologies depends on more than these technical and cultural considerations; economic factors and governmental policies also strongly influence the ultimate success of any innovation. Some economists exaggerate in claiming that profitability is the key factor guiding technical change and disregard the substantial effects of culture. Most technological innovations in agriculture can be fully used and adopted only by large landowners in case they believe that the innovations will increase their incomes even if they harm sectors of the population and reduce the availability of food in a country.
